

I have been an ahIconite since year 2004. Since the very beginning I had love for science and opted it as my major subjects post 10th standard. I developed love for cosmetic science when I attended a workshop in 2016. Over the year I developed a lot of cosmetic products and my interest started growing stronger. I was determined to take it up professionally and did further research in the required area. My subjects helped me further understand the chemistry that goes in the making process. In 2017, I took a step forward in achieving my dream by getting admission in London College of Fashion for msc in cosmetic science. – Ritika Mittal
